

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK —

Chris Jones

Sunday is the day when we remember Christ's transfiguration – his complete change of appearance into a more beautiful state on the mountain. Before then, he was seen as a human being, albeit one who could do miraculous things and show the God-side of his nature.

Transfiguration is an interesting word. Can it ever be applied to us?

I think it can at times. As I get older, I become more aware that God can work in me and in others in certain circumstances. Like many of us, Linda and I are facing illness and hard times in our family situations, but these can be transfigured.

For example, when our great-nephew went to visit his father in hospital recently, he was taken aback by the effect that the surgery had on this man he had always considered as strong. Fighting back the tears he said "How are you, Dad?" In that moment, it he was transformed by the sight of his father but wanted to remain positive for him.

Linda and I are celebrating 50 years of marriage this weekend. On the whole, it has been great and I feel blessed to have such a loyal and supportive partner in life. But we are not perfect and, at times, I know I have not been Godlike in my behaviour towards her. I seek to be a good husband but have not always succeeded. God is still working in my life to bring about that transfiguration he desires to see in me.

Can we be like the transfigured Christ on that mountain?
